It was based on politics, on the fact that the Congressional delegations from the other states previously under consideration were able to use their political muscle pass the Nuclear Queen of Spades on over to the State of Nevada. The Department of Energy was then left with a fools errand: come up with a post-hoc technical and scientific rationalization for a policy that was based entirely on politics. It is an unenviable task. While the testimony we will hear today expresses optimism that a license application can be submitted to the NRC by September 2008 and that the repository itself can begin receiving waste by March 2017, there is good reason to doubt that the Department will be able to meet these objectives. Consider some of the problems that have come...
